Mrs. Rachel Sturtevant, commiserated and read the following verses, commemorating an event of the wedding of her aunt, Mrs. Crockett:

I remember, I remember, O many years ago,
I had an Aunt Vina, whom I don't ever see,
I saw her when she came to visit me,
I was the most pleased child you ever saw.
Then one bright warm July day
I was out with her to play,
I saw my Aunt Vina riding down the street
And a beautiful smile on her face,
But they didn't stop, any, on their way,
Then great was my grief and disappointment,
How Pauline cried, as they passed in haste,
"Will stop on our way back, so no tears waste."

This cheered me up for I knew they would,
Then I ran for the house as fast as I could,
I washed my face and fixed my hair,
For I knew Aunt Vina soon would be there.
True to her word, soon in they drove,
And I hid the tears in the shade, by Joe!
Said Aunt Vina to me, and blushed as she spoke,
"This fellow is now an uncle to you."
Then I could see to the parson's they'd been,
And had the knot tied as sure as sin—
And I forgave her for driving right by,
Without telling me just what for and why.
This event happened in 1905,
On July 29, as sure as you're alive,
Twenty years ago, they've spent,
Working, toiling, and pleasure bent.
As on the 29th we can't celebrate,
Let us this day this couple congratulate,
And may they be happy for many years more,
For happy is the man who has a wife like mine.
Everyone joined in congratulations and good wishes and all made plans to meet again next year.
The bride, who lives in Boston, were not able to be there.

Eggs are good at any meal. For dinner many people prefer ham and fried eggs to the more elaborate foods. Or one might take a suggestion from the prevailing custom of serving scrambled eggs and sausages for a main course, and use this good combination for either supper or dinner. An omelet, or a soufflé made with many eggs in combination with cheese or ground vegetables, meat, or fish, is another way for eggs as a main dish. A platter of hard-cooked eggs in a curry sauce is a pleasing variation from the usual flavors. The U. S. Department of Agriculture has published a leaflet containing recipes for a number of good egg dishes and desserts in which eggs predominate.

I'LL SAY WE'RE LUCKY

A statement by the treasury announces that under the new income tax rates a man with a net income of $15,000 makes a saving of $98.75. That's more than most of us made on stock last year—or it would be, if we only had a $15,000 income.

It is noted from the census of 1930 that as a whole the population of the country towns show an increase. Maine shows a gain of 14,148 from 82 of her towns, whose population is under 5,000.

Frank D. Marshall, President of the Maine Automobile Association, the State of Maine Division of the American Automobile Association, is issuing a warning to the motorists of the state against the activities of salesmen who solicit membership in so-called auto protective organizations which are unable to fulfill the promises made by their representatives.

Several such associations have conducted membership campaigns throughout the state and, after exhausting their fields insofar as the acquisition of membership fees is concerned, have gone out of business.

Already in anticipation of the spring and summer motoring season, Maine auto owners have been approached by "high pressure" salesmen, who promise that, by paying a fee of a modest membership fee, the motorist is guaranteed the following service: free towing anywhere in the United States and Canada, free service in automobile emergencies, free loan of car in case of breakdown, a material saving on oil and repairs through liberal discounts guaranteed by the so-called Association.

The A. A. A. in its various points out that such associations obviously are without resources to back the guarantees offered and were they financially equipped to handle the promised service the income from membership fees would not balance the outlay necessary to provide such service.

According to officials of the State of Maine Division of the A. A. A. organizations now soliciting memberships in the state are without standing among garage owners, supply dealers or lawyers who could furnish the service offered.

At a conference of A. A. A. club executives of all New England states held last Friday in Worcester, Massachusetts, preliminary steps were taken toward the introduction of legislation in all Eastern states compelling automobile associations and automobile clubs to show financial responsibility before legally soliciting patronage.

The warning from Mr. Marshall and the Maine Automobile Association contains a suggestion that you investigate before you invest.

HABIT CHANGING SLOWLY

Nine out of ten people dislike changing, or even advocating, any custom that has ruled for a long time. The objections to daylight saving time are an example; we have heard quite often that it is an interference with "God's time" and this despite the fact that there have been many changes in the calendar since time has been reckoned. In the western part of Canada the C. P. B. runs its trains on a 24 hour day; 3 p. m. is 15 o'clock and 11 p. m. is 23 o'clock and it seems to work all right.

The adoption of the metric system seems logical until you try to get it accepted. Just why figuring everything in multiples of ten does not appeal to everybody is hardly understandable; it's so much easier one would believe that its advantage would strike home immediately, but the proposition to adopt it in the United States has gained no headway in twenty years.

The recent publicity given the proposition to make a 13 month calendar of equal 28 days each aroused a storm of opposition and the more recent suggestion that all holidays be celebrated on Monday of the week in which they occur was received like a suggestion that somebody dynamite Boston.

All customarily have been changed several times. Christmas has been celebrated on four different days, but nevertheless some suggestions have been made to change it. Perhaps, like most things of value, they are obtained only after a struggle and the wearing down of popular opposition. It took ten years to get anything like uniform street residence numbering, and even now there are discrepancies; some streets in even the large cities have no numbers at all while only a few years ago one of the business streets of Boston was numbered down one side and up the other so that number 58 was opposite number 1, it being only a short street.

Just why do most people dislike any change?

SUN SUITS HEALTHFUL

"The season during which sun suits furnish sufficient protection from cold is comparatively short in Maine so that unusual care is needed to secure all the benefit possible from the sun's rays." says Helen Spaulding, clothing specialist, University of Maine, who is now conducting meetings in co-operation with home demonstration agents on "Dress the Children". Continuing she says, "The comfortable and attractive sun suits being shown at the meetings on all the protection needed on a hot day and to permit the accumulation of a healthful tan. They are made of loosely woven gay prints or of materials of solid colors. Some have waists of very sheer or open woven material to offer as little resistance as possible to the sun's rays. They are made with few fastenings to be easy to put on and off. They are cut with very short legs and low under the arms and over chest and back to permit as much tanning as possible.

"The small boy girl who is permitted to pretty much live in these sun suits garments during the summer is fortunate for they are not only good looking and easy to wear, but they are positive health builders."

Quoting from a leaflet of the U. S. Department of Agriculture on "Sun Suits for Children", the leaflet says: "Baths should be given to all well children to keep them well and to many sick children to help make them well. When the weather permits and the sun is not too hot, arrange for the youngsters to be outdoors in the sunshine as much as possible. Sick children should take such sun baths stripped or clad merely in very short pants. In many places this can be done only in front of an open window. The health giving ultra violet rays of the sun do not pass through ordinary glass. A physician should advise how long the exposure should be and carefully watch the condition of the child so that no ill effects will result from too long treatments."
